Rock rules

65th Air Base Wing and U.S. Forces Azores Commander Col. Bill Percival teaches the first belay techniques class, Saturday, at the fitness center's new rock climbing wall. More than 50 people turned out for the grand opening. Twelve Team Lajes members attended the first training class. Classes are conducted by appointment Saturdays, 10-11:30 a.m.; Tuesdays, 6-7:30 p.m.; and Wednesdays, noon-1:30 p.m.

AF releases latest selective bonus list

WASHINGTON (AFPN) — The Air Force has released its latest selective re-enlistment bonus list and has decided to keep bonuses at their current levels, with the exception of those in three career fields.

For the past several months, personnel officials have worked to optimize the SRB program within available funding.

While there are no increases in bonuses, the Air Force has increased the SRB budget from $25 million in fiscal 1997, to $165 million in fiscal 2001, said Lt. Col. Francine Blackmon, chief of Air Force skills management. Additionally, the number of Air Force Specialty Codes eligible for an SRB has more than tripled since fiscal 1997.

Zone A bonuses in the radio communications systems, 3C1X1, career field was reduced from 2.0 to 1.0. The Zone A bonus for communications cable systems, 2E6X2, and the Zone C bonus for visual information, 3U0X1, have been discontinued.

The SRB changes for the three AFSCs take effect May 1.

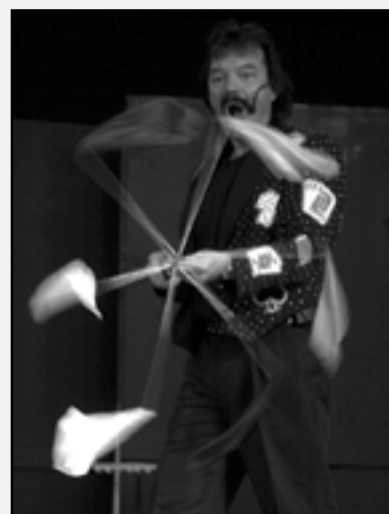

Personnel officials are scheduled to conduct the next semiannual SRB review in October.

During the evaluation, all enlisted specialties are reviewed. Criteria for determining which enlisted skills receive an SRB include current and projected manning levels, re-enlistment trends and inputs from career field managers.

For more information or to determine eligibility for an SRB, people can call the military personnel flight reenlistments office at 2-2155.

Azoreans celebrate Holy Ghost festival

Eduardo Lima
Public affairs

Every year, with the arrival of spring comes good weather and the celebration of the Holy Ghost festival and street bullfights.

The festival runs Easter Sunday, for eight weeks, until Pentecost Sunday.

This ancient tradition supposedly began on mainland Portugal around 1296 by initiative of Portuguese Queen Isabel. She founded the first Holy Ghost brotherhood to honor the poorest man in the kingdom.

According to tradition, every year the poorest man in the kingdom was placed on the king's throne and crowned "emperor" during a religious ceremony held in his honor in the royal church.

The crowning ceremony was followed by a royal procession from the church to the palace with the poorest man wearing the royal crown. A banquet offered in his honor would follow the royal parade.

This act of royal humbleness was introduced by the first settlers to the Azores around 1432 and has continued from generation to generation. This tradition has disappeared on the mainland, but it is actively celebrated in the Azores and other regions of the world where Azoreans live, namely California, Massachusetts, Hawaii, Canada and Brazil.

Although royalty and noblemen originally celebrated this religious event, over time the common people adopted it and silver crowns replaced the royal crown.

During natural catastrophes like volcanic eruptions and earthquakes, or when someone is very ill, the Azorean people carry the Holy Ghost crowns to the churches and pray for the Holy Ghost to save them.

If their prayers are answered, they host a week-long festival to honor the Holy Ghost.

Some members of the brotherhood are given the honor of keeping the Holy Ghost crowns and ornaments in their homes.

In the evenings, festival hosts, relatives and other guests gather in front of the altar to pray the rosary and worship the Holy Ghost. Then, on Thursday or Friday, the "festa do bezerro" (festival of the calves) takes place. The calves are fetched from the pastures and decorated with flowers, paper ribbons and cow bells, then paraded through the village streets. The calves usually lead the parade followed by the hosts, guests, musicians and singers.

Later, the calves are slaughtered and their meat is divided -- some for the Sunday banquet; some given as alms to relatives and the village's poorest people.

Sunday's activities start early with food preparation. Around noon, guests arrive at the host's house and the Holy Ghost parade heads toward the church with the crowns and ornaments for the crowning ceremony during Mass.

After the priest blesses the crowns and selected individuals -- usually the host's children or the hosts themselves -- are crowned, the procession heads back to the house with the honorees wearing the crown.

Later in the afternoon, the guests take a seat for the Holy Ghost banquet that is served with the local wine "vinho de cheiro."

The last event of the week is when the host and guests take the crowns and ornaments, during a parade, to the next honoree's home, where a similar celebration begins again with a new family.

New PFE study guide distribution in progress

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFPN) — Air Force Personnel Center officials announced that delivery of the new Promotion Fitness Examination Study Guide (Volume 1) and the new U.S. Air Force Supervisory Examination Study Guide (Volume 2) began in April.

The new PFEs are expected to arrive at Lajes near the end of April, according to 65th Military Personnel Flight Superintendent Senior Master Sgt. Dale Kenney.

Unit orderly rooms will distribute the new study guides as soon as they arrive at Lajes.

"I'm confident this will be a smooth process," Kenney said. "Our goal is to have all the PFEs issued within a week of them hitting the base."

The study guides have been revised to reflect the most current information on Air Force programs, and a summary of changes is included with each volume. Both publications are effective July 1 and are the required study references for promotion cycle 01E9, and testing cycles 02E8, 02E6/7 and 02E5.

With the elimination of base publication distribution offices, base and unit Weighted Airman Promotion System monitors are responsible for ensuring study guides are provided to all enlisted members with an emphasis on those who are promotion-eligible.

Another big change is the increase in time an airman has access to the proper testing materials. Currently, the Air Force requires individuals have access to study materials for only 30 days to be required to test. The new change requires that 30-day window be extended to 60 days. When there is a delay in the receipt of materials through no fault of the member, he or she will not be required to test until they have been granted 60 days to study.

WAPS monitors will first issue study guides to people eligible for promotion in the E-9 September 2001 testing cycle. Master sergeants testing in cycle 02E8 are second priority, staff and technical sergeants testing in cycles 02E6/7 are third priority, and the remaining enlisted population is fourth.

Members requiring replacement material because of loss or damage should contact their unit WAPS monitor for new guides.

AFPC announces new WAPS testing schedule

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFPN) — In an effort to reduce the waiting time between enlisted promotion testing and the promotion release dates, the Air Force recently revised the Weighted Airman Promotion System testing schedule.

The Air Force recently revised the WAPS testing schedule to reduce the waiting time between enlisted promotion testing and the promotion release dates.

After this year's chief master sergeant testing cycle, all enlisted testing cycles for 2002 will be pushed back anywhere from a couple of weeks to two months.

None of these changes impact the ongoing testing cycles for 2001 or the promotion eligibility cutoff dates for current or future promotion cycles.

"It has been our goal for quite some time to bring enlisted promotion testing windows and public announcement dates closer together," said Chief Master Sgt. Greg Haley, chief of the enlisted promotions and military testing branch. "We've always been able to keep the wait time down for individuals competing for chief master sergeant. Why not the other ranks?"

"The most significant change is corporately moving E-8 testing from November to January every year," Haley said. "It allows E-8 eligibles to test in January, get boarded in February, and receive their results in March — similar to the E-9 promotion process. Although there will be tighter deadlines on nonweighables, the gain for members should be well worth it."

"We are also providing a larger gap between the E-6/7 and E-5 cycles which will allow more time to work testing products and finalize eligibility changes for the cycle," he said.

"These changes are the result of direct feedback from the troops, and these improvements are what we believe the majority of the enlisted force wants to see. The changes make sense, and they turn an already great promotion system into an even better one," Haley said.

For more information about testing issues, members should call the military personnel flight at 2-4201.

Revised testing dates and cycles they affect

For chief master sergeant, testing will take place the first four days after Labor Day starting with cycle 01E9.

For senior master sergeant, testing will move from November to January starting with cycle 02E8, Jan. 10-24.

For master and technical sergeant, testing slips 15 days to Feb. 15-March 31, starting with cycle 02E7/02E6.

For staff sergeant, testing will slip one month. Senior airmen will test in May starting with cycle 02E5.

Visitors conjure tricks at Lajes

More than 350 Team Lajes members experienced Moore Magic and More Fun at the community center April 3. The free show was a mix of magic, comedy and ventriloquism. Lajes was the first stop in the group's European tour.

Going the distance

Lieutenant to run Boston Marathon

Tech. Sgt. Jose Ruiz
Public affairs

One of Team Lajes' own will represent U.S. Forces Azores and the U.S. Navy during the 105th Boston Marathon Monday.

Lt. Steve Bowser, USFORAZ deputy director for logistics, will compete against 14,999 other athletes during the marathon, which dates back to 1896, making it the oldest event of its kind in the Western Hemisphere.

"With the exception of Olympic marathons, this is the only open marathon that you have to qualify for," said Bowser who has competed in six previous marathons. He added that having to meet a worldwide standard to compete in the race makes the challenge much more interesting.

"This event will be broadcasted nationally, and the best distance runners in the world will be on the same course as me," he said. "To me, knowing that I'll be running in the footsteps of giants, on the same course and on the very same day will be a neat feeling."

Bowser, who started distance running in 1997, has been following a 12-week training program in preparation for the marathon, running as much as 60 miles in a week and up to 22 miles in a single run.

"It helps me keep track of when I should be running, how far I should be running and at what pace," he said, referring to the program.

Bowser said one of the biggest hurdles he faces in the Boston Marathon is a lengthy uphill run. This is where being assigned to Terceira has helped.

Thanks to the many rolling hills that are part of Terceira's terrain, he has found no shortage of steep hills to run.

"The hill in Boston is 1.20 miles long, and it's called 'Heartbreak Hill,'" he explained. "I have a hill near my house that I use as my Heartbreak Hill. I've incorporated it into my 20-plus mile runs."

The native Pennsylvanian said he feels in peak shape, but realizes that beating the world's greatest distance runner's at Boston is an almost impossible feat. Instead, his goal is to finish among the top 1,500 runners.

"The one thing I like about running is that you're competing against yourself," he said. "Also, in that large of a population of runners, you tend to migrate towards those people in the same skill as you. So from about halfway through the end of the race, those people become your competition. Those are the people I look forward to competing against."

After the marathon, the lieutenant plans to take a one-week break from running to give his body the opportunity to recuperate. After the break, he plans to return to his "maintenance running -- about 40 miles per week."
